Occupation	Actor
Years active	1988–present

Early life

Hughes was born in Apple Valley, California, the son of Mary (née Phelps) and John Hughes born in Lake Jackson, Texas.[1] He has three older half-siblings.[3][2] He has English and Chickasaw ancestry.[4]

Career

Hughes started his acting career in a public service announcement when he was 22 months old, and followed that up by appearing in his first feature film five months later.[1] From his years as a child actor, Hughes was consistently one of the busiest young actors in Hollywood. One of his first films was Jack the Bear, opposite Danny DeVito; in addition, he has appeared on film in Pet Sematary (1989), Kindergarten Cop (1990), Wes Craven's New Nightmare (1994), Apollo 13 (1995), Spawn (1997), Zeus and Roxanne (1997) and Mercury Rising (1998).

Hughes has also appeared in numerous television films. He has been a series regular, recurring character or a guest star on several television series. He played Aaron Bailey on Full House from 1990 to 1995. Other appearances have been in Baywatch (1998), Sister Kate (1989–1990), Beverly Hills, 90210 (1991), Melrose Place (1992), Touched by an Angel (1994), and The Nanny (1994). Hughes received an Emmy Award certificate for his participation as the voice of Tommy in the number-one-rated Fox animated television series Life with Louie (1995). His other voice-over credits include twin babies, Sly and Witt, in the feature film Baby Geniuses (1999).

After a break in his career, Hughes re-emerged as a teen in the science-fiction series Roswell. He played a villain who was part of a renegade group of aliens. As a musician, Hughes released two albums in 1995, at the age of nine. One is self-titled and the other is called Halloween Haunts. He wrote songs for both albums. They were recorded and released by his own company, Little Chief Inc. In 2013, Hughes directed the segment "See" in the horror anthology film Chilling Visions: 5 Senses of Fear.
